Contents

Abstract .................................................. i

Declaration ............................................... ii

Contents .................................................. iii

List of figures ........................................... vi

Abbreviations ............................................. viii

Acknowledgements ........................................ ix

Chapter 1: Introduction ................................ 1

1.1 The origins of the concept .......................... 1

1.2. IM and the ‘information’ profession ............ 2

1.3. IM vs. KM .......................................... 3

1.4. Contemporary profile of IM: purpose of the study 4

1.5. Aims and Objectives ............................... 5

1.6. Structure of the dissertation ..................... 5

Chapter 2: Literature Review .......................... 7

2.1. Recognition of IM as a discipline and a profession 7

2.1.1. What is a discipline? .......................... 7

2.1.2. What is a profession? ......................... 8

2.2. IM as a discipline ................................. 11

2.2.1. Context of the IM discipline ................. 11

2.2.2. Nature of the IM discipline ................. 14

2.2.3. Stakeholders of the IM discipline within the UK 15

2.2.4. Studies of the IM curriculum ............... 18

2.3. IM as a profession ................................ 23

2.3.1. Role of representative associations .......... 23

2.3.2. Professional practice of IM .................. 24

2.4 Summary of chapter ................................ 28

Chapter 3: Methodology ............................... 29

3.1. Literature Search .................................. 29

3.2. Chosen methodology .............................. 30

3.3. Sampling ........................................... 31

3.3.1 Courses .......................................... 31
3.3.1.1. Sampling of courses 31
3.3.2. Job advertisements 32
    3.3.2.1. Sources of job advertisements 33
        3.3.2.1.1. Use of online sources 33
    3.3.2.2. Sampling of job advertisements 34
3.4. Content Analysis 35
    3.4.1. Coding schedule and manual 35
        3.4.1.1. Course coding scheme 36
        3.4.1.2. Job advertisement coding scheme 37
3.5. Data Collected 37
    3.5.1. Course data collected 37
    3.5.2. Job advertisement data collected 38
3.6. Data Analysis 39
3.7 Summary of methodology 40

Chapter 4: Results 41

4.1. Subject and topic coverage within the teaching of IM 41
    4.1.1. Coverage by course 41
    4.1.2. Comparison of coverage by course and by university 42
    4.1.3. Comparison of coverage by course level 45
    4.1.4. Comparison of coverage by course accreditation status 49
4.2. Courses by department: an indicator of an IM discipline 53
4.3. Requested skills, experience and knowledge within IM job descriptions 54
    4.3.1. Requested prior experience 54
    4.3.2. Identified skills and areas of knowledge and experience 55
4.4. Identified duties within IM job descriptions 56
4.5. Indicators of an IM profession 57
    4.5.1. Education level and qualifications 57
    4.5.2. Professional Status 58
4.6 Employment sectors 59
4.7 Source of advertisements 59
4.8. Comparison of IM teaching against IM practice 60
    4.8.1. Coverage of categories as grouped within the Core Schema and Applications Environment areas of the CILIP BPK 61
    4.8.2. Coverage of categories as grouped within the Generic and transferable skills area of the CILIP BPK 62
4.8.3. Comparison of category ranking

4.9 Summary of Results

Chapter 5: Conclusions

5.1. IM as a discipline
   5.1.1. Indicators of an IM discipline
   5.1.2. Representation of the IM discipline by the CILIP BPK
   5.1.3. Content of an IM discipline
   5.1.4. Coverage of KM and RM
   5.1.5. Effect of course structure
   5.1.6. Effect of module information

5.2. IM as a profession
   5.2.1. Indicators of an IM profession
   5.2.2. IM employment markets
   5.2.3. Nature of IM practice
   5.2.4. Effect of sample

5.3. Comparison of IM teaching against IM practice

5.4. Recommendations for further study

Bibliography

Appendix 1: Table of courses considered within the study

Appendix 2: IM Course Coding Manual

Appendix 3: Job Advertisement Coding Manual

Appendix 4: Table to show the coverage of topics and subjects within IM courses

Appendix 5: Table to show percentage of advertisements covering identified category, and the ranking of that category

Appendix 6: Table to show percentage of courses covering identified category, and the ranking of that category