

Becoming Better 'Men' and 'Women': Negotiating Normativity through Gender Mainstreaming in Post-Tsunami Reconstruction Initiatives in Aceh, Indonesia

Volume I

Marjaana Jauhola

Thesis submitted in fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of PhD

Department of International Politics
Aberystwyth University

8th April 2010

Table of Contents

Summary	iii
Acknowledgements	iv
Glossary	v
List of Maps and Illustrations	ix
Table of Contents	x
Introduction: ‘We Will Build Aceh and Nias and We Will Build It Back Better’	2
Research Question and Theoretical Framework.....	5
Main Contributions of the Thesis.....	7
Research Data: Ethnography of Gender Advocacy in Post-Tsunami Aceh	8
Key Research Data.....	9
Collection of the Data and Limitations of the Analysis.....	15
Key Arguments of the Thesis.....	21
Chapter 1. Gender Mainstreaming as We Know It: Gender, Development and Disasters	27
1.1 Introduction	27
1.2 Policy Advocacy on Gender and Development/Disasters.....	28
1.2.1 From WID to GAD.....	28
1.2.2 Gender and Disasters.....	30
1.2.3 Beijing Conference – Illustrating the Normative Boundaries of the Concept Gender.....	32
1.3 Gender Mainstreaming as Institutional Structures and Tools.....	34
1.3.1 Gender Mainstreaming Structures	35
1.3.2 Tools of Gender Mainstreaming.....	36
1.4 Feminist Academic Contributions to the Debate: From Gender to Feminisms?.....	38
1.4.1 Early Pioneers of the Feminist Analysis of Disasters.....	39
1.4.2 Critical Takes on Gender	41
1.4.3 Emerging Literature on Tsunami-Affected Regions: A Return to Feminism?.....	47
1.5 Conclusion	51
Chapter 2. Feminism as Subversion: Exposing the Intersectionality of Norms.....	52
2.1 Introduction: Is Feminism All about the ‘Woman’?	52
2.2 The Sex/Gender Divide and the Limits of Feminism.....	56
2.2.1 Sex/Gender Trouble.....	56
2.2.2 Subversion and Performativity as Feminism.....	58
2.3 Towards Intersectional Understanding of Norms.....	66
2.3.1 Norms, Normalisation and Regulation	66
2.3.2 From Heterosexual Matrix to Intersectionality of Norms.....	70
2.4 A Method of Multiple Reading	75
2.4.1 On Normativity and Discourse.....	75
2.4.2 Method of Multiple Reading.....	80
2.5 Conclusion.....	83
Chapter 3. Gender Mainstreaming in the Acehnese and Indonesian Contexts	84
3.1 Introduction.....	84
3.2 Wider Indonesian Socio-Political Context.....	84
3.2.1 The End of Suharto’s Regime: Economic and Political Reforms	84
3.2.2 Decentralisation, Islam and the Indonesian State	86
3.3 The Wider Socio-Political Context in Aceh	88
3.3.1 Context of Conflict in Aceh	89
3.3.2 Aceh in 2006	94
3.4 The Structure of the Empirical Chapters	103

Chapter 4. ‘What is Gender?’	105
4.1 Introduction: Who Has Got Their Gender Right?	105
4.2 Discursive Practices on Sex/Gender in the Acehese Context	107
4.2.1 Human Biology/Anatomy: Sex Difference in the Body	108
4.2.2 Sex Difference and Gender in the Acehese Islamic Interpretation	113
4.2.3 Feminist Theories as Discursive Practice	118
4.3 Politics of Gender	122
4.3.1 Gender: An Anti-Islamic Agenda?	124
4.3.2 “As long as it does not mean that men start wearing lipstick”	127
4.4 Subversive Sites of Gender Advocacy	130
4.4.1 “Waria are Humans Too”	130
4.4.2 Pluralisme and Tauhid – Dislocating the Focus of Feminism?	136
4.5 Conclusion	140
Chapter 5. ‘Women Can Do It Too!’ – Analysis of a Post-Tsunami Gender Advocacy Campaign	142
5.1 Introduction: Setting the Stage	142
5.2 Adolescent Girl as the Future Hope	150
5.2.1 Better Future Embodied Into an Adolescent Girl	150
5.2.2 Working Hard to Reach One's Dreams	154
5.3 Constructing Men and Women, Constructing a Harmonious Home?	161
5.3.1 Women’s Economic Participation as Instrument for Development	162
5.3.2 Constructing Harmonious Home: Being a Good Father and Husband	166
5.3.3 Going Beyond the Nuclear Family Constructs	170
5.4 Constructing Images of a Good Muslim	180
5.4.1 Religious Piety	181
5.4.2 The Muslim Dress	184
5.5 Conclusion	193
Chapter 6. Gender Mainstreaming and Project Management Practices	196
6.1 Introduction	196
6.2 Aid Practices Governing the ‘Acehese Village’	198
6.2.1 The Progressive Village As the Development Ideal	198
6.2.2 Project Management Tools and Temporality of Aid	210
6.2.3 Gender Advocates – Reproducing Normative Boundaries and Social Differentiations	215
6.3 Subversive Spatiality and Temporality	220
6.3.1 Disruptions to Chronological Time	222
6.3.2 Radio drama – A Parody of Progressive Space and Time?	226
6.4 Conclusion: Where is ‘Aceh’ located?	229
Conclusion: Five Years On, Is Aceh Built Back Better?	232